Bachelors hit with large water bill

BY KEVIN VINK
 MVP Staff

People often complain about their bills, but seldom are the bills a complete surprise to the recipient. Ross Peters, a 21-year-old leaseholder who lives in a fourplex on the south end of 23 Street, got quite the surprise, however, when he received a $767 water bill from the Town of Didsbury for the month of May.

"I was away from Didsbury working the month of May and Josh - my brother who I live with - phoned me telling me we had a $767.93 water bill," said Peters.

Because he was out of town for work at the time, he told the town staff that his brother could discuss the bill on his behalf.

"I was then informed that for that month, we could pay what our average bill had been and it would get sorted out later," he noted.

So the brothers, who are the only two occupants of the rental suite, paid that amount - about $60 - and assumed everything was alright until the next bill came in, showing the full previous amount plus late fees.

Peters has since gone to the town office twice to discuss the issue, and was told that despite his dispute of the bill, he is still on the hook to pay for it.

He noted that an inspection team from the town did come by to look at the meter and found it to be in working order.

The second time he went to the town office, "(The front desk staff) told me I could pay $150 per month to pay off the balance, and I asked if I could speak to Nita (Bartholow, CFO for the town) myself.

"So Nita came up and I told her I was very furious about this, as I feel I respectfully should be, and I explained to her that that is a very, very large amount of water, and there is no way that we could have accrued that amount."

The bill Peters received states that the bachelors' suite consumed 238 cubic metres, he said, which is 238,000 litres, compared to his average monthly usage of about 10 cubic metres.

He broke it down and said it equals about 440 litres per 24 hours for the entire month.

"And that just seems completely out of the park and completely unreasonable to me," he said.

"The only other thing in my head that could possibly use that amount of water could be the washing machine," he said, noting the appliance uses about 120 litres per load of laundry.

He noted that though the bathroom toilet has a leak, it is a slow leak that has not posed a problem since he moved into the suite in January last year.

Other than the outstanding balance, Peters' water bill has gone back to 10 cubic metres a month, and he is at a loss as to what to do.

WEEKEND CONCERT - Some attendees dance in front of the stage during the performance of Broken Heroes at the second annual Mountain View Rocks festival. Turn to page 6 for the full story.

"I don't think we've ever even got near 20 cubes (in a month) even."

He noted that though he is not happy about the bill, it's the principle behind it that bothers him.

"I mean, $700 to me personally, that's not a huge number, but I know there's some people if they were stuck with this, this is their kids not getting food for a month. It feels like robbery."

Nita Bartholow, chief financial officer for the town, said that though unfortunate, Peters has no choice but to foot the bill.

"It's unfortunate, but it does happen - I've had it happen to me," said Bartholow.

"But you've just got to be on top of maintaining your toilets and your taps, and you can't ignore them. I can't stress that enough - you can't ignore a leaking running toilet."

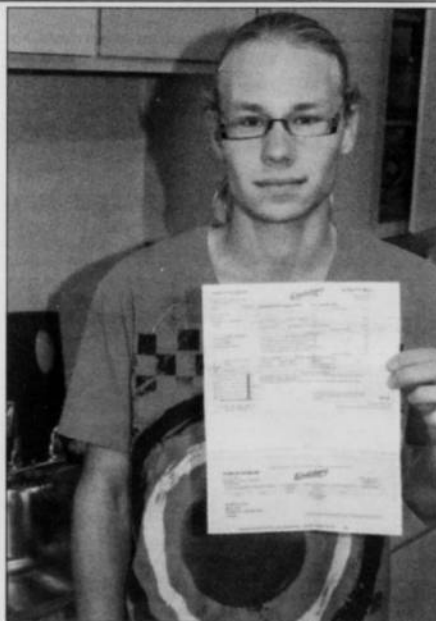

A running toilet can waste up to two gallons of water per minute, she noted.

"That's 2,880 gallons a day. If you do nothing about it for 14 days, I mean you're wasting 13 cubic metres a day... It's unbelievable what a leaking, dripping tap or a dripping shower will waste."

She added that a faulty water meter would likely not have been the cause for the bill, as when a meter starts to wear out, it slows down rather than speeds up.

"So when a water meter - this is 99.9 per cent of the time - if a water meter is not functioning properly, it's in favour of the consumer."

Bartholow also stated that it would not be a mistake in the billing process, as a mistake would have shown up as a credit in the following month's bill, due to how the billing system works.

Ross Peters, who lives with his brother in one of the fourplexes on the south end of 23 Street, holds up his water bill for the month of May. The brothers are baffled as to how their usage spiked about 2,300 per cent in May and subsequently dropped the following month.

Fatal collision on QEII Highway Police suspect fatigue played a factor in late-night crash

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

A Calgary man was pronounced dead in a Calgary hospital after being flown by STARS Air Ambulance, following a collision in the northbound lane of the QEII Highway at 1:30 a.m. on Saturday, July 20, according to Didsbury RCMP.

Cpl. Warren Wright said that the 34-year-old man was headed southbound in his Volkswagen Beetle when he drifted out of the southbound lane, and into the centre median cable barrier, about three kilometres north of the Carstairs overpass.

The car drove through the cable barrier and onto the northbound lanes of QEII, colliding with the trailer of a northbound tractor-trailer unit, he noted.

"The driver of the semi is unharmed – wasn't injured at all," said Wright, noting that though the collision is still under investigation, police suspect that the driver was fatigued.

He added police do not believe that alcohol, speed or road conditions were contributing factors, because though there had been rain earlier that evening, the vehicle did not hydroplane, based on the location of water pools on the road at the time.

"There were pockets of water, but not where the crash happened. I think basically he was tired, he was on his way back to Calgary."

Wright said that it is always a wise idea for drivers to pull over if they are feeling fatigued and take a short power nap, as that there are rest stops built into the highway at various points.

"I mean, what's 20 minutes, really," he stated.

Traffic in the northbound lane was shut down completely for about an hour to allow STARS to land, and the southbound lane was slowed down while police, EMS, and fire services were on scene, he added.

Mobile breast screening clinic coming in August

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

The Alberta Health Services (AHS) Screen Test Mobile Mammography Clinic will be at the Didsbury hospital from Aug. 3-14, providing women over the age of 50 with a quick and easy mammogram, say officials.

Harmony McRae, community coordinator for the mobile mammography clinic, stated the importance of a mammogram for women.

"Breast cancer in Alberta is probably more common than people realize – about one in nine women will be diagnosed with breast cancer in their lifetimes," said McRae.

"The good news is now that we have all this really good mammogram equipment, we can find cancers when they're so small that treatment options are way better. Ninety-five per cent of women diagnosed with breast cancer are now surviving it, but it is important that we find it early."

The reason why mammograms are important, she noted, is that they can find breast cancers two to three years before they can be felt with traditional self-exams.

"So that's two to three years before a cancer becomes big enough to be a lump that a woman would be able to feel on their own," she said.

This is one reason why AHS recommends that women don't only get tested once, but once every two years, especially once they get to be 50 or older, she added.

"Younger women 40 to 49 can also attend our program and they can actually have a mammogram every year, but they need a doctor's referral to get their first mammogram," she noted.

"And that's only for their first mammogram. So if they've never had a mammogram before in Alberta, they do need a doctor's referral, but only for their first one."

She noted that though health professionals have recommended women self-screen their breasts in the past, that procedure will only reveal lumps that are large enough to feel, whereas a mammogram will reveal cancerous lumps as small as a couple of millimetres.

"(Self-exams are) actually not recommended anymore in terms of screening guidelines... (women) may not know what's normal or what's abnormal. With a mammogram, it's pretty clear – I mean, it's an X-ray of the breast tissue," she noted.

"So even if you were to do a breast self-exam every month – which is what most women would probably do – it may take a long time for a cancer to develop to a point where you can actually feel it."

The clinic has 123 total appointment slots available and McRae noted there are many spots still available.

Clinic administrators can be contacted to arrange an appointment at 1-800-667-0604, she said, adding the clinic's website, (www.screeningforlife.ca), is a great place to learn more, though appointments can only be made by phone.

Farmers' market gets off to good start

Weekly market brings fresh foods and other various sundries into town

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

After a special opening day on July 1, the Didsbury Farmers' Market will once again be providing weekly opportunities for residents to snag fresh produce, as well as various sundries unavailable commercially, say officials.

Bob Davidson, the market manager, said the market will resume weekly on July 10, and will run every Wednesday evening from 5 to 7 p.m. until Sept. 18.

The opening market went "extremely well," said Davidson.

"We had more vendors than we've had and probably a better turnout (than usual), and we had some interesting ones, like the group from out towards Sunnyslope that had the alpaca wool and articles, they're all done there."

They also had vendors sporting fresh eggs, homemade crafts and goods, clothing, and preserves and pickles, he noted.

The area Hutterite colonies will be coming in regularly with all sorts of fresh produce and baked goods all season, he added.

"What we will have coming for the opening markets...all the way from homemade jewelry, and there will be a fellow coming with art and photography, there will be ones with spices and crocheted items, and Avon, Watkins and Regal products."

There will also be a fruit truck starting in the latter half of July, he said.

"We did have for the July 1 market and may have occasionally through the summer, a lady that sells children's books. In fact she's the author of some of them," he added.

"And we do have a woman who is marketing younger books, from scientific all the way through fairy tales, and she should be around for a good number of the markets as well."

He noted that another vendor will be bringing African products being sold as part of a relief program to raise money for a project there.

"The rest we'll probably have to wait for a little more information on. We do have potential for more but at this point we don't have confirmation," he added.

"We did a lot of work to try and get vendors for the July 1 market, and we are hoping some of the ones that only committed to that one will return for the regular markets," he noted.

"Some of them can't, because they can only come on weekends and that's one of the problems."

The market does have at this point more vendors committed than it had the last couple of years, and Davidson is hoping that with more vendors coming out that more residents will come out to support them.

"The variety goes up with all the fruits and vegetables coming to production. Later in the year, we should get the Kohuts with locally-grown corn which is extremely good."

Overall, he and other officials have high hopes for this year's market, which seems to have gotten off to a good start this season, and he said he hopes the community can come out to support some of the great local vendors in the area.

Pat Crothers doles out a sample of one of her many gourmet jellies for Cherie Plamping at the Didsbury Farmers' Market on Wednesday, July 17.

Crowded court systems slow justice

The judges, prosecutors, defence lawyers and staff members who operate the province's court system have every right to be proud of the way fair and even justice is dispensed across Alberta on a day-to-day basis.

Yet as some victims, witnesses and accused persons continue to see long delays in having their cases move through the courts, there is obviously still room for improvement.

DAN SINGLETON

For example, in the Didsbury provincial court last week, trial dates were being set into March 2014 – meaning everyone involved in those cases will have to wait at least eight months before getting their day in court.

And that's on top of the time already spent just getting to the trial date setting stage.

The provincial government announced last week that it is working hard to reduce court delays and has recently made "significant progress" in eliminating and reducing road-blocks in the court system.

"We are committed to making changes to the justice system and those changes are paying off," said Minister of Justice and Solicitor General Jonathan Denis.

"I'm very pleased with the progress made so far to ensure those charged with serious and violent offences have their cases heard in court. Assistant Deputy Minister Greg Lepp has my full support to continue making these necessary changes."

In recent months the province has made a number of changes to the court system aimed at increasing efficiency and accessibility.

Those efforts include a marked increase in the use of direct indictments, which allow for the bypassing of preliminary hearings, sending cases directly to Queen's Bench trials.

That, in turn, has reduced the workload at the provincial court level, freeing up staff and helping move other cases through those courts in a more timely fashion, said Denis.

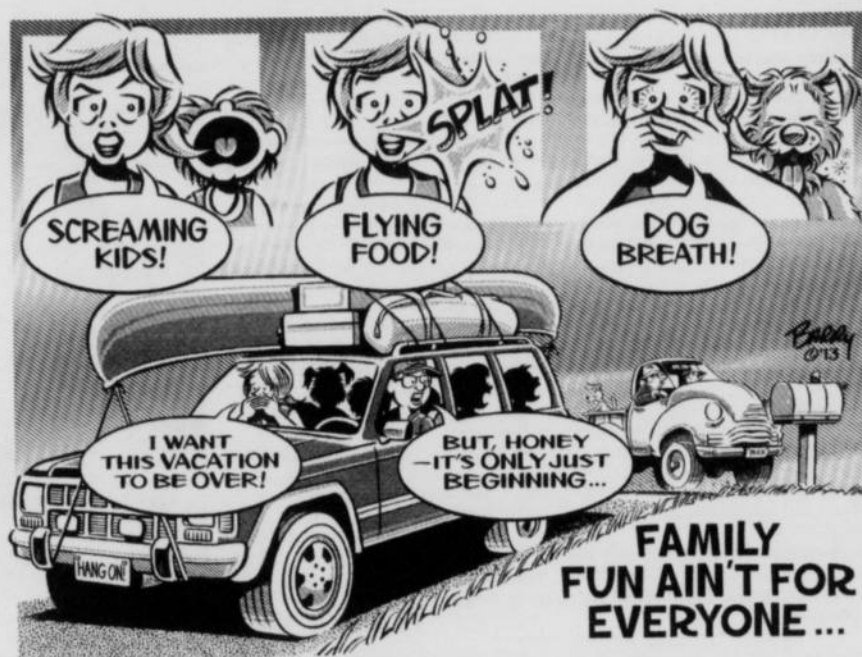

The province has also expanded the use of court case management, which in some instances allows cases to be diverted entirely from the courtroom. (The Didsbury provincial court is actually one of the courts where case management has been expanded).

"Alberta's Prosecution Service is committed to implementing actions and solutions," said Assistant Deputy Minister of Criminal Justice Lepp. "The work does not end here, there are still significant actions we will take to further our success."

The court system is one of this province's vital public services, ensuring that people victimized by crime can receive justice and move on with their lives.

As such, the Redford government should be applauded for its recent efforts to eliminate undue delays in the court system – and should be encouraged to seek out further improvements.

What gov'ts do when we're on vacation

BY MARK MILKE

If you ever have a chance to talk privately to politicians, the more candid among them will admit to the frustration they feel by public and press inattention to what they consider to be important or accurate.

The politicians and their staff will inevitably report their frustration that issues they believe critical are superseded by some comparatively minor political event or scandal making the front pages.

Governments are often roasted over occasionally minor matters that amount to no more than a couple of bucks – although that's the public's right – but receive little credit for major reforms that save taxpayers tens of millions of dollars.

On the other hand, politicians are often derided because they treat the public with disdain, as, for example, when governments try to bury bad news surreptitiously – say, at the end of a day close to the first long weekend of summer.

This happened twice in just the past two weeks.

In British Columbia, just before the July long weekend, the provincial government announced it would appeal a recent B.C. Supreme Court decision that criticized the province for billing private property owners for expensive archaeological digs desired by the bureaucrats.

The second incident also took place just before the July long weekend when the Alberta government released its Annual Report: as per the norm over the past five years much of it was written in red ink.

The first big number from the last fiscal year (April 1, 2012 to March 31, 2013) is $3.1 billion, the provincial deficit last year, according to the consolidated figures. Or "just" $2.8 billion when one looks at how the numbers are prepared for provincial budgets. (There is a difference but the details would test a reader's attention.)

But back in the February budget, the province decided to change how it reported surpluses and deficits, with the net effect that deficits now look smaller and surpluses bigger. And the new way of crunching numbers also allows Alberta's provincial debt to increase every year, even when the province claims an operational surplus.

The government justified its new provincial accounting rules by saying it parallels how businesses record their financial state of affairs. Except that little of what governments do, regrettably, mirrors private sector realities, including the fact that businesses must earn their revenues from consumers voluntarily. Businesses must also provide goods and services at a quality that is reflective of their price or go under.

Governments have few such incentives in the short term.

And when it comes to borrowing, the significant difference between the private and government sector is the existence of natural restraints on how much can be borrowed. Overstretched companies will quickly find themselves without additional sources of borrowed cash. They must thus economize or risk bankruptcy.

Governments rarely feel such outside pressure, unless their recklessness has gone on for decades (i.e., Greece, and perhaps soon Ontario). The lack of restraints means government rarely ask themselves how they could deliver services differently, more effectively, and for a more reasonable price. Instead, they simply borrow (and tax) more.

Another big number Albertans might have missed from the Annual Report while away for the long weekend is $10.9 billion, the unfunded public sector pension liability owed by all Albertans and which is double what the province faced in 2006. In other words, Alberta has faced significant debt for some time.

Hiding things from the public's attention may be "smart" politics, but it does the public a great disservice. Those who engage in such sport should hardly be surprised the public is then wary of giving the political class credit, even when deserve it for tackling substantive issues.

Police received reports of multiple shots fired from a resident who said bullets were striking her house in the rural area near Rge. Rd. 15 and Twp. Rd. 295 on Monday, July 15, according to Cpl. Clint Gulash.

"She thought there were four shots total," said Gulash. "And in fact, a bullet did go through a window. So members attended, and while they were en route, the member called the complainant, who was afraid to go outside."

When officers arrived, a window had indeed been shot, and officers found a .22-calibre round between the windowpanes. Another window frame was shot, and three holes were located in the siding of the house from rounds going through it, he said.

One of the shots even went through a mudroom wall and the round was found on the floor in the house, he added.

Officers acted quickly to trace the trajectory of the rounds, and found that they seemed to be coming from a nearby residence.

"They located a male at the residence, who admitted he had just been shooting gophers, and showed the member where he was at and shooting," said Gulash. "It was the same area as the damaged residence."

The 52-year-old male was arrested for careless use of a firearm, and the firearm that he had been using was seized, he noted.

"That could have been very dangerous, obviously. The round went right through the wall - she could have easily been struck by any of those bullets," he said.

"It wasn't done with any kind of malice or anything like that, but it was just one of those careless use situations where any time you're given a firearm, it's incumbent upon the person using it that they are pointing and shooting it in a safe direction at all times."

He said the complainant was happy that the issue was resolved so swiftly, and was also relieved that the firearm had been seized.

"One (bullet) is dangerous enough, let alone five or six that obviously have the potential to do harm to animals or people, and really anything else that's around, not to mention damaged property."

The man was charged and released, and will be due in court to address the charge.

"It was due to the good work by our members that we resolved this very quickly. Everything was done quickly and we managed to bring a speedy resolution to the situation."

Stolen motorcycle

A motorcycle was stolen after its owner ran out of gas while driving on Highway 766, just south of Westcott road, said RCMP Cpl. Clint Gulash.

The driver parked the bike at an oil lease site in the area, and when he returned, the bike had disappeared. Gulash said the driver says he ran out of gas on July 6 and reported the bike missing on July 15.

The bike is a maroon-coloured, 1980 Yamaha XS1100S, with licence plate CSK-17, he said.

"Initially he had told us it was left overnight, but it turned out it was left for over a week," said Gulash.

"Obviously, if you leave something alone that long, people are going to notice."

Low-flying aircraft

RCMP have received numerous calls recently regarding low-flying aircraft in their jurisdiction, and Cpl. Clint Gulash wanted to inform the public that police do not generally deal with those kinds of issues.

"There is a civil aviation complaints line that residents can call," said Gulash, noting that though there is a Transport Canada emergency line that can be contacted in situations such as this, often these planes are servicing farmland.

"A lot of times, we've got bug spraying, crop spraying, not to mention people doing flying lessons," he said.

"So there's a whole bevy of things that occur with people flying over areas, and we seem to be getting a bunch of complaints about low-flying aircraft."

Livestock missing

A rancher found that 21 goats and one calf were missing from his property on Rge. Rd. 280A and Twp. Rd. 313, when he visited the property on the morning of July 12, said Gulash.

He noted that the farm animals are either lost or stolen, though the complainant noted the property has a 10-foot-tall fence, and he hasn't been able to locate any holes.

The gate was open when the owner visited the property, said Gulash, noting that the missing goats are prized Boer goats and are untagged.

"There are actually quite stiff penalties for stealing livestock and selling them illicitly," he said, noting that there is a livestock section of the RCMP, which will be following up the initial investigation.

Strange collision

A driver reported being rear-ended on the night of July 14 while driving southbound in an 80 km/h zone, south of Twp. Rd. 310, said Gulash.

After realizing the offender was not going to stop, the driver caught up to the white truck and obtained a licence plate number, which police later processed, determining that the truck was not a match to the plate, he added.

The plate was BHS-1336, and Gulash said the truck is possibly a stolen vehicle.

Airdrie RCMP were advised about the truck but it was not located, he said.

The driver did not suffer any injuries or serious damage to his vehicle, he added.

"He was swerving so it could have been an impaired driver, a stolen vehicle, or both."

Mountain View Rocks 2013

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

The second annual Mountain View Rocks (MVR) festival was very well received, according to organizers, with an estimated 400 to 500 attendees and a total of eight bands rocking out with both original and tribute songs.

MVR president Deborah Patten said that although there were a couple of minor technical difficulties, the show went well overall.

"It went well, I mean there's always going to be glitches – each year you learn a little bit – but all in all it went well. Next year I obviously hope for more people," said Patten.

"But from a technical perspective it was fine. There are a few things that need to be worked on for next year, but as far as the bands that were there and the coordinating of the on-off stage thing, for the most part that went pretty well."

Though she wasn't able to confirm attendance numbers at the time of press, she estimated that over the course of the day, there were between 400 and 500 attendees.

"We definitely had people that didn't stay there for Harlequin – they were there to see their kids' band or their friends' kid," she noted.

Eight rock bands played at the show, including classic rock headliner Harlequin, Storm, Set and Stoned, Kinband, Broken Heroes, Narda Roberts Band, Fallen Abstract, and Insanity.

The shows kicked off in the early afternoon and the rock rolled on well into the night, she noted, with Harlequin finishing off at about 11:30 p.m. and hanging out at the stage afterward to chat with other bands and attendees.

There were over 30 volunteers, including the planning committee, she added, and town staff also pitched in to help with various duties including the beer gardens and security.

"I would like to let it be known that I'm grateful to all my volunteers, all the sponsors that supported Mountain View Rocks, and all the people who came in at the last minute to save the day...it would not happen without the support of a wonderful group of people that I couldn't do without."

She noted that mayor Brian Wittal and Coun. Peter Versluys put in extra effort to help both before and after the show.

"They're absolutely wonderful support systems for Mountain View Rocks," said Patten.

"They give 110 per cent. They did last year. They did our mini-concert the year before, but especially last year and this year. I mean, when I showed up to do cleanup (Sunday) morning, Brian was already there.

"They're very committed and very devoted. They give me everything they can and every support that they possibly can, and it's so appreciated."

Though this is the third year that MVR has held a concert, this is only the second year that it has been a standalone event. She noted that if people can enjoy the show, and if some of the smaller local bands can learn from the more experienced ones, she considers it a success.

"It includes youth, and also gives local, Alberta bands and up-and-coming bands a chance to have a venue where they can showcase prior to a headliner, and give them a chance to network, learn and grow, and possibly move on to bigger and better things as musicians," she said.

"And that is certainly my objective for each year. And each year I'm going to try and do that whole spread thing and just get different musicians of different rock genres, and always ending with the classic rock headliners."

She said it's great to get in big-name headliners because they are a draw, but also because they have "been there, done that, and they can teach things to the younger up-and-coming bands that are showcasing prior to them."

The festival got some great feedback from what she was able to gather, she added.

"One thing that was very prevalent was 'I can't believe Harlequin is in Didsbury,'" she laughed.

"There wasn't a person there that had a complaint," she added, noting that everybody there seemed to share the lighthearted party mood.

"It was all positive. I was so happy about the feedback from the crowd."

Clifford Thomas Murphy entered into rest peacefully and surrounded by family on July 17, 2013 at the age of 96 years.

Born on February 25, 1917 he was the youngest child and only son born to Thomas and Phoebe Murphy. Cliff attended school in Westcott from Grades 1-7, Clovermount for Grade 8 and finished his schooling in Grade 9 at Didsbury. After school, Cliff returned to the family farm to help his dad, eventually taking over the farm and continuing to work the land. During their 70 years of marriage, they welcomed 7 children: Frank, Bonnie, Richard, Donna, Thomas, Michael and Patrick; 17 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren. Cliff loved sports, happily coaching teams that his children played for and cheering on his grandchildren. Always involved in the community, he served on the Westcott United Church Board, Westcott Hall Board, was a member of the United Grain Growers and served 3 terms as county councillor from 1977 to 1986. In his spare time, Cliff enjoyed wood working and made numerous keepsakes for his family. He touched many lives and will be missed by all who knew him. Funeral services were held on Saturday July 20, 2013 at Zion Evangelical Missionary Church, Didsbury with Pastor Allison Lefebvre officiating. Interment was held at the Westcott Cemetery.
